

Highlights

- Streaming quasi-Newton intervals converge to a wrong coverage on dependent data.
- That limiting coverage is derived exactly from one variance-inflation factor.
- Blocking the gradient step makes the long-run variance estimable for free.
- The valid interval is cheaper: per block, not per observation.
- Blocking creates a step-size condition; an $O(d)$ safeguard restores it.